Hi Rebecca

As per my comments attached the recent addendum report which focuses on explaining why the noise levels should be considered acceptable despite not meeting the required condition criteria, rather than demonstrating how the required noise criteria could be achieved through appropriate mitigation

This is not considered critical as we are talking about a difference of 1- 2 dB and the results are still below existing background.

The consultant has also explained that the noise source is more general in nature and is not attributable to a particular item of equipment or plant.

Overall, we are discussing a max of 2dB difference, and this is relatively minor. Therefore, if it is demonstrated that the source of the noise cannot reasonably be mitigated, I would be comfortable accepting the proposals and amending the conditions accordingly.

Thank you

Andre
